Little Neddie.

Our Baby.

Christmas,

1891.

Lillie Irene.

A SOUL, discreet, from God,
Down from the Heavens came—
A blue-eyed lassie,
Sweet, and plump and fair
As the morning light.
And my baby boy
Is now a father—
Faithful, fond and true.
The stranger came
With two celestial guards,
Sent from highest Heaven,
And fond they watch
The infant growth.
May't prove a magnet true,
To draw our loving hearts
Up to the sweet world
From whence it came.

Little Neddie.

THE garden walks are silent now;
The listening flowers weep, the sweet buds droop;
Our little singing bird has flown.
He plumed his white wings for Heaven,
And folds them now in Paradise.
To bless the angels with his melody—
To swell the strain of joy and gladness
In the rich garden above.
Favored nursling, grow in Heaven.
Breezes soft play round thee, love;
Lay thy trusting head upon
An angel's arm and rest.
My darling, rest, rest.
The good Shepherd folds
Here and there a lamb, to draw
The wandering sheep to
Fields of "living green."

Our Baby.

A BIRD of beauty rare
Seems warbling measures sweet.
No wings are putting forth,
But little hands and feet.

A charming little thing,
With tender notes atrill,
And, sailing in sweet robes,
Subdues the hearts at will.

Dear little honey bee,
Dispensing sweets so well,
We love thee, my darling,
Oh, more than tongue can tell.

Thou art a brilliant gem,
A dainty jewel, rare:
We'll set thee in our hearts,
And ever keep thee there.
